

Heritage Protection

Heritage conservation is an ongoing effort achieved by managing change. Heritage conservation tools are available to municipalities through the Local Government Act. Some tools enable the City to provide incentives to property owners in exchange for exterior restoration and long term legal protection of a property. Other tools delay the demolition of a property to enable the City and owner to discuss options for retention.

There are generally two levels of heritage protection in New Westminster: Heritage Conservation Areas and Heritage Designations (which are achieved through Heritage Revitalization Agreement).

Heritage Designation may be applied to an individual property anywhere in the city. It is long-term legal protection that generally only allows changes to the property for conservation purposes. The City typically uses Heritage Revitalization Agreements (HRAs) to achieve Heritage Designation.

A Heritage Conservation Area (HCA) applies to a distinct and identifiable neighbourhood, characterized by its historic value. Queen’s Park is currently the only neighbourhood in the city designated as an HCA. Each property in the Queen’s Park neighbourhood is in one of two categories: Non-Protected and Protected.

Comparing Queen’s Park Heritage Conservation Area Categories and Typical Heritage Revitalization Agreements

Provisions	Heritage Conservation Area Non-Protected Category	Heritage Conservation Area Protected Category	Heritage Designation (Through a Heritage Revitalization Agreement)

HRAs in Queen's Park

The Heritage Designation achieved through an HRA offers a higher level of protection than the Heritage Conservation Area. This means that someone with a property in the Protected Category can still apply for an HRA, and would receive greater benefit than what would be offered through the incentives program.
